The new HyperMotion software enhances ball speed, acceleration and the weight of the ball, as well as improved ball spin, height and drop. Players can control the ball at the pass, dribble, shot, free kick, headed flick or use their in-game skills to create or defend a perfect set piece or free kick. Players use their new skills in conjunction with their in-game tactics to create a realistic experience throughout play. For example, the classic wall pass has been reintroduced with new skill animations and in-game polish to feel more like an authentic pass. “The hardest part of building a football game is attempting to get it right while staying true to the authentic experience,” said Matt Phuong, Director of Online Game Development at EA Sports. “Our goal for FIFA 22 is to help you feel like you are playing your favorite football game and not just a computer football game in motion.”

New Skill Introductions

New dribble opportunities for long and short passes: Long passes can be used to increase the speed of ball movement and create more space for your teammates. Short passes can be used to confuse and overload your opponents and force them to make a decision as to where to pass the ball.

New on-ball dribbling animations: Offensive players have more direction and speed with the pass when dribbling in possession. Offensive players have more direction with the pass when passing to a teammate.

New passing animations: Passing to a teammate can be used to throw on-ball defenders off-balance while waiting for a teammate to open up with the pass. Passing can be used to slow down the pace of play with different options and a variety of passes for attacking players to suit their play style.

New corner animations: During corner kicks, short, long and directional passes can be used to open up the on-ball defender and create space for the teammate.

Tackling animations: Players tackle in both short and long passes to create space for a teammate or open up the on-ball defender.

New free kicks: Free kicks can be used to force your opponent to make a decision to high ball, low-ball or switch defenders, before the chosen teammate can arrive at the ball. Free kick locations are presented more in line with how they are
