I am a computer science major but I have no experience in research and I really want to get some. What do you think is the best way to get started? A: Highly recommended book. Defining Research: Informing Models of Scholarly Production A: My advice is to find a research group or project to work on. Given how broad the idea of "research" is, it's difficult to give any advice on what you should do. Whatever it is, it's best to do something real and possibly meaningful. Q: Memory layout of an object As per this blog link (`__FUNCTION__` is a function pointer. But when I try to use the object of type C, the address that points to C class is not the same as the address
